It is easy enough to explain the first statement: Petersburg scored twelve runs and Richmond scored only nine. As to the second statement, Hedgepeth says that he wasn't in condition, which must ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact must ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact ever remain a satisfactory explanation.

must ever remain a satisfactory explanation, in view of the fact that he alone is the best judge of his condition.

That Heinrich Busch was anxious to win that ball game is proved through the mere assertion that he used all of his available pitchers but one, and he—lim Vance by name—was seen warming up on the side lines, awaiting the collapse of Mr. Clyde Richmond. Naming the Goober hurlers who performed in the order in which they appeared, they were Messrs. Hedgepeth, Brooks and Richmond.

That Heinrich Busch was anxious to win that ball game is eral interest. This class was won by Mrs. V. T. Churchman, driving Starlight, the sensational little hackney mare bought from E. H. Harriman in New York not quite two years ago, after she was shown the gate for running away. In a perfectly appointed right this entry was easily first.

Mrs. Allen Poits won third place with Bracken Rose in this same class, and in sporting tandems won second.

The game was marked particularly by the game struggle put up by the Colts. The Goobers put up a six-run lead before the locals got started. They hit Harry Griffin, who was the debu-tante of the afternoon, whenever and wherever than willed. He had as much We approached within sight of the front, something happened, usually in the way of opposing runs, to stop our progress. Frequently we had men on the paths, men anxious and willing to travel home, but the punch that would send them there was lacking. They were left stranded, and with them lying close to the buoys there was no ROANOKE TRIMS chance of winning.

It was a many-sided game, many-sided in more than one respect Heinie Busch entered a protest in the fifth inning, when, with two on, Doc New-ton, who was the first to face Harvey frocks, nailed a hit to right that scored Ducky Eberts and sent Laval to third.
